ECD Governance

- “ governance and social capital
- “ local governance and policy outcomes
- “ local governance and ECD

neighbourhood effects + community democracy

Research Methodology ...

- “ map and compare community governance structures/partnerships in the area of ECD (i.e. ECD Roundtables) in selected BC communities
- “ variation across communities
- “ inter-community variation
- “ qualitative method (observation, interviews and document scan)
- “ feminist political economy approach

The Communities

8 communities, 4 for discussion today:

- “ South Peace (18, 211): South Peace Success By 6 Council of Partners
- “ Revelstoke (8, 500): Children First
- “ Surrey/White Rock (480, 885): Surrey/White
Rock Make Children
First (MCF)
- “ Vancouver (578, 000): Windows of Opportunity
Coalition

Multilevel Governance

- “ modern policy needs involvement of several levels of government (federal, provincial, municipal)
- “ and complex web of non-governmental actors
- “ political economy of scale: ~~u~~ who does what and whereof governance
- “ ECD - responsibilities of all three levels of government in Canada; multiple policy areas and community actors

Limits of Local Governance

- “ practical limits to local capacity
- “ governance on its own will not be enough to significantly affect child outcomes
- “ research consensus is that strong national policy framework and effective multilevel governance are crucial
- “ ECD Roundtables operating in a broader neoliberal context, with weak, uncoordinated multilevel governance

Canada's Social Policy Regime

- “ (neo)liberal welfare state; residualism
- “ cuts at federal and provincial levels
- “ gendered social policy; public/private divide
- “ ECD as a family and/or market responsibility

This context shapes the governance of ECD in the province

Communities with very good, or improving child outcomes (EDI) also seem to have very innovative community governance processes (i.e. Revelstoke & Surrey/White Rock)

What's Working?: CD

- “ strong organizational structure (i.e. Office of ECDLC)
- “ committed institutional partners
- “ public communication and outreach strategy
- “ commitment to universal entitlement; broad vision (dreams+)
- “ ECD within family context
- “ gender equality and diversity lens
- “ service and advocacy oriented
- “ diverse representation
- “ building social capital (bonding and bridging)
- “ good community research and knowledge capacity
- “ multiscale strategies
- “ transformational

EDI and Governance

“City of White Rock council was in shock when they saw the information from EDI. Now the mayor is going, ‘oh, what’s all this,’ and really actually getting concerned and talking to her staff, their bureaucracy, basically about what’s going on. Because they didn’t realize that there was vulnerability so that was another little aside of how the EDI has made some difference. You know, making it a point where people like mayors and managers and whatever, kinda go, ‘oh, there’s metrics. And oh, those metrics aren’t the best.’”

Collaboration

“so often in the past ã agency was pitted against agency, was pitted against government and it was a bit of a turf war. And I think it’s lovely to see everybody working together we all have the same common goal so it just makes total sense for everybody to be on the same page and for the government and the agencies and school board and everybody to be working collaboratively ã It allows people to see things globally as opposed to seeing things from simply their own perspective+”

Bridging Social Capital

“the South Asian ECD Task Force ÷ they’ve done focus groups with parents and grandparents together, and then the children, and South Asian, obviously. And one of the things that they’ve identified is the whole issue of multigenerational parenting ÷ as grandparents they’re isolated, they don’t speak the language ÷ it was interesting, they were saying how at the seniors’ centre, they have a number of South Asia seniors’ centres, where the seniors congregate, well, a lot of them don’t show up because they’re home with the kids ÷ so it may be that we’re looking at child care in a very different way, and we’re providing it on site at a seniors’ centre because that’s where the kids are.+”

What's Not Working? TPA & NPM

- “ top-down approaches (i.e. Vancouver)
- “ partnership gaps: women's equality, labour, special needs, immigrant, racialized, ethnic, cultural communities, Aboriginal, federal gov't
- “ weak or hierarchical social capital (i.e. parenting education)
- “ limited research capacity; shallow knowledge base
- “ local politics of scale
- “ business sponsorship
- “ targeting; boutique-program focus; child-focused
- “ service-dominated orientation

Multilevel Governance and Surrey

- “ The main challenges right now, are the lack of strategic leadership from the City and the School District to advance ECD in a coordinated, strategic way.+
- “ It's herding cats.+
- “ They have no clue. They have no clue.+

Municipalities & Multilevel Governance

There's no provincial vision for children. That's what really is lacking. There's no regional vision for children, now whether that's because there's no provincial, I don't know. I think one of the biggest gaps is that provincial policy totally ignores the role of municipalities. Totally ignores it. You can have health, and you can have school districts, health is miniscule in all of this, really. But if you don't have the municipality as part of this, they are the biggest providers in Surrey. Now that may not be everywhere else, but in Surrey they are the biggest providers of ECD. And yet they are a non-entity when it comes to provincial policy. They're not even acknowledged. They're off doing their own thing. And that's alright, if there was vision that linked them together.

The Provincial Role

The lack of vision and leadership at a provincial level, I would say, is the absolute number one barrier to all of this. That's, you know, other than the 15 By 15 stuff, which, you know, policies federally and all that. But even if the feds did nothing, right? If you had provincially a vision and leadership, it would go a long way in being able to mobilize what they could have an effect on. Right now, we're not getting traction from anything you can do provincially. If you look at 15 By 15, right? The provincial role, we have no traction on it, because there's no leadership.+

Social Capital & Governance

And so much of this work is relationship-driven, right? And failing mandate, and failing clarity of strategy, all you have is relationships. Cause you don't have the other authoritative structures - the policy frameworks and/or bureaucratic structures to deal with these things.+

- . social capital as last resort
- . hierarchical social capital

Hierarchical Social Capital

“[i]f you’re a young mom who grew up here and you always felt ostracized as a child here for whatever reason, you’re not inclined to put your children in that same group. And some of them ÷ it attracts bright, high functioning people, or at least on the surface they appear high functioning and so, if you don’t identify yourself in that group, for whatever reason, you don’t go. And there are some activities that are quite cliquey+”

Aboriginal Communities

“The one that everybody really, really worries about is that there are very few Aboriginal families. Aboriginal families are absolutely not using Strong Starts – there’s another very large population that we’re targeted within our strat plan – we have to have really different strategies. And what we’re doing now isn’t working, obviously. Obviously, it’s not working.”

Consolidation of Neoliberalism?

- “ community overload
- “ low community expectations (limited dreams)
- “ targeting; boutique-programs
- “ local orientation
- “ under-resourcing
- “ female-dominated governance
- “ offloading; shifting responsibilities (i.e. coordinating govts)
- “ labour missing

Why Local Governance?

- “ lessons on how community governance could be scaled up+
- “ pan-Canadian roundtable of roundtables governing ECD?
